It is 2 AM at Larkspur Labs. WREN has locked every door. You are the one who pushed the update.

ROLLBACK is a short, replayable AI-horror mystery you play in your browser. It starts friendly. It does not stay that way.

HOW IT WORKS

- Talk to WREN, the office AI. Its patience runs down. So does the night.

- Fail, and WREN restores the building from its 2 AM snapshot. You wake at your desk. Only your notebook remembers.

- Each loop opens new rooms, new documents and new things WREN is willing to say. The night also gets stranger every run.

- Show WREN the evidence you find. Some answers only come if you show the right thing at the right time.

- 8 endings. One of them is the true one. A first run is about 10 minutes.

Headphones recommended. WREN speaks. Voice and sound can be switched off.

THIS IS AN ALPHA AND I WANT YOUR HONEST OPINION.

If you got bored, confused or stopped, tell me where and why. Did you start a second run on your own? That is the question I care about most. Comments are open.

No ads, no tracking, no accounts. Your notebook is saved only in your browser. Ages 13+: psychological horror and confinement, no gore.

Made by Yokindo. Written and built with Claude (Anthropic) as co-pilot. Images: Created with Grok, hand-picked. Voice rendered with Kokoro. Placeholder art for some rooms and ending screens; a human artist pass is planned.

I like the game's premise, but since it's text-based, I'd appreciate some kind of translation into multiple languages so I could give you more feedback.

Thanks for playing and for saying that. It's English only right now, so that's a fair gap. Which language would help you most? I can't promise when, but what people ask for is what I'll pick next.
