I remember playing this when it first released and I loved it! at the time I didn't fully understand everything, but I did see the effort that went into this wonderful game. The art style, music, and plot were all amazing and meshed very nicely. Thank you for making this game along with all your other masterpieces!

i played this game for the first time whem it just came out. It was during the darkest times of my life. 2015-2016 i started harming myself and closing my eyes while crossing the road. on my 14th birthday (five days before this game came out) my best freinds in the world, from a different class, went on a field trip. there was a huge accident that day in the place they went to- 15 people have died. fortunatly they were not part of the people that died, but i didnt know that during that time. the trauma of that day only made me sink deeper into depresion.

all this to say: the day i found this game, i remembered thinking i will end up like may. i still see a lot of similarities, but in may of 2021 i stopped harming myself, and although it has been hard i havent done it since. whenever i feel like i need a soothing game, something i can relate to, be calm, cry, feel accepted, i redownlad this game. i remember it by heart now. as time passed, i feel like i can now espire to be the main charachter.

i'm 21 now, and most things i liked when i was 14 i don't really relate to anymore. thank you for always being there for me to have a good cry and remember to try love myself, and be there for others.

Of these types of games, this one was surprisingly good. I came in with low expectations as most of these games are underwhelming. I played through and got every ending.

Dialogue was good, it feels true to conversation and is generally enjoyable to read; there were some lines I didn't like, but would say they are nonetheless accurate to how people speak. Choices/branching is done well and makes good use of the short run-time to elevate their importance. Visual quality is exceptional, the look is cohesive, expressive, and beautiful, with creative layering of visual elements that I love to see. I can't say it was resonant for me the way it was for everyone else, but I appreciate it's message on suicide prevention and how it was communicated without resorting to total transparency.

Overall it is a well done short visual novel. Not an absolute masterpiece as people are saying but it's at least impressionable.

Some bugs/typos. "Mean either" instead of "me neither" while talking with May, and a funny bug where you can work as late as 3 AM, and when you leave the laptop it will carry on as if it's 7PM with you leaving the apartment. On a related note, there is unfortunately not a workaholic route :(

Hi! I noticed your game is not available in Spanish yet. I'm a native Spanish speaker and I'd love to help you translate it to reach a wider audience in Latin America and Spain. I'll leave my email address here so we can discuss the project further if you're interested: [damiantranslations@outlook.com]. Let me know what you think!

To Raphel

I miss so much, I wish the people around u loved u as much as I did. You told me to not put the guilt on me but, I couldn't help but to feel like it was my fault.

As selfish as it is, I kinda want the people who make you hurt to know what they did, even though I know that would bring u back.

Love you so much, I'm sorry
